

Background to Pomegranate Health podcast

Pomegranate Health is a professional development podcast focusing on topics such as challenges in decision-making, clinical ethics, social good and physician wellbeing. It has several thousands of listeners and considerable potential to influence practice.

Podcasts are developed by an RACP producer in consultation with members of the Podcast Editorial Group. This group is formed every 12 months year to help maintain the high standards of Pomegranate Health. The editorial group is primarily made up of RACP physicians, but has also included other health practitioners, academics and patient advocates.

The main prerequisites for membership are an interest in the podcasting medium and a desire to advance the culture of healthcare. Past episodes are available at www.racp.edu.au/podcast.

Key Responsibilities of editorial group members

- (1) Discuss potential new podcast topics and prioritise them for development*
- (2) For a chosen topic, suggest themes to explore and people to interview*
- (3) Listen to audio drafts and provide feedback to the producer to improve it before publication*

Correspondence within the group is entirely via email and there are no timetabled meetings. The time asked of members averages no more than 90 minutes per month but the informal nature of the group makes it very easy adapt to an individual own schedule. Fellows on the group will be eligible for CPD points for their contribution to educational development.

The RACP requires that members have no previous or current professional or personal connections that may give cause for a perceived conflict of interest with the College. Members must adhere to the College’s principles of respectful collaboration as outlined in the Working Together Policy.

Application Information

- Please complete the application form below, including a very brief resumé, a description of any prior editorial experience and an outline of the podcasts you find most compelling and why.
- Applications should be emailed to Mic Cavazzini, Podcast Program Manager at podcast@racp.edu.au. In the subject line write “Podcast Editorial Group 2022”
- Applications will be accepted until 31st January 2022

Applicant Details

Titles
Given Name
Family Name
Email
Phone

Brief Resumé - Outline your affiliations including clinical roles, academic posts and other professional memberships. Former roles can be included if relevant.

Editorial Experience - Share any previous roles in an editorial/ teaching capacity or outline how your other experiences contribute to the objectives of the podcast.

Podcast Interest - List a few podcasts you listen to for professional or personal interest and explain why they are good exemplars of the medium and its potential